Bandits Rob Mokena Family to Music

4 BANDITS POSE AS OFFICERS TO GAIN ENTRANCE

That highway men must have music to work with and at the same time smooth the ruffled feelings of their victims appears to be the latest in the highway man's code, as was demonstrated Monday evening when four gunmen held up Frank T. Livings who resides on the former Huweiler farm southeast of Mokena.

Mr. Livings had just returned home from his work in Harvey and the family had just sat down to the supper table when there was a rap at the door. When Mr. Livings opened the door he saw two men with officers stars on standing there. They said they were Cook County deputy sheriffs and had lost their way and asked to be directed to a main highway. As Mr. Livings was about to give them the information, one of the men poked a gun in his side and said "Get in there, this is a sick up."

As Mr. Livings backed into the room, the gunmen and two more of their gang followed into the room. Mr. Livings was bound in a rocking chair with wire.

While this was going on, Edward Yunker, a neighbor walked in and he, too, was tied up in a chair. One of the bandit crew kept guard over the captives while one musically inclined bandit sat down at the piano and played classical and popular numbers. The rest of the gang began a search of the upstairs and down stairs rooms for loot.

The bandit guarding Mr. Livings said that members of his gang might take off his shoes and burn the soles of his feet with cigarettes if they did not find all the loot they were seeking.

The gunmen took things cool and smoked cigarettes and then tossing them and lit matches around carelessly near drapes and flimsy curtains until Mr. Livings protested.

Mrs. Livings and the children were not molested.

After spending about an hour at the Livings home the robbers departed after forcing their musical partner to leave the piano rather reluctantly.

When Mrs. Livings pleaded with the robbers not to take her fur coat they granted her plea.

The loot secured consisted of $90 in cash, two wrist watches, valued at $75 each, a $65 amber necklace, a $100 diamond ring and a $25 shot gun.

Silver ware and a gold watch was not touched.

The leader of the gang was described by Mr. Livings as being approximately 35 years old, 5 feet 11 inches tall, of ruddy complexion, with dark hair. The others all appeared about 25 years old, one of the group wearing thick-lensed glasses, a second by dark hair and a red face and the third by unwashed hands and face and long blond hair.

After leaving the Livings home, the bandit car is thought to have headed west.

Mr. Livings and Mr. Yunker were liberated and Sheriff Michael Breen, Will County sheriff was called. The deputies responded quickly, no trace whatsoever was found of the bandit car.

Mr. Livings drew his pay Monday and it is thought the bandits followed him out from Harvey.

Mr. Livings is in the employ of the Ingle & Shepherd Crank Shaft Company of Harvey.

Mokena Couple Showered With Gifts and Flowers on Golden Wedding Day

With the sun peeping thru the clouds and the weather moderating, the weather man provided a fine winter day for the big event in the lives of Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. Hirsch, Sr., Thursday when they held open house in honor of their golden wedding day.

All day long and especially during the afternoon and evening relatives and friends from Mokena and out of town called to convey their best wishes of congratulation. Mr. and Mrs. Hirsch were reminded again and again that it is indeed a rare privilege for husband and wife to be able to travel life's pathway together for half a century.

The celebrants were surprised in the afternoon with beautiful bouquets of flowers from friends and relatives among them being bouquets from the Ladies Aid Society of the St. John Evangelical church of which Mrs. Hirsch is a member, also a bouquet of chrysanthemums from all the Mokena business men. Letters, cards and telegrams bearing congratulatory messages poured in during the day and evening.

A musical program was enjoyed. Free eats and refreshments were served to all who came.

The daughters of the celebrants, Mrs. Mabel Mall and Mrs. Myrtle Sippel presented them with a large golden wedding cake.

A register was on hand and all the guests signed their names.

The years seemed to roll back in the evening part of the festivities when an oil parlor lamp which was presented to the celebrants as a gift fifty years ago on the day of their wedding, was lit again in honor of the golden event.

The festivities were thoroughly enjoyed by all attending.

Mr. and Mrs. Hirsch received many gifts appropriate to the occasion.

They were met at the altar by the groom who was attended by his brother Charles and Clarence Lehnert, a cousin of the bride.

Albert Lehnert and Russell Brandt acted as ushers.

The bride wore a floor length white satin dress with a long veil and carried a bouquet of white roses. Miss Stender was attired in pale blue with accessories to match and carried an arm bouquet of pink roses. Miss Eggert wore a tan dress with matching accessories and carries an arm bouquet of talisman roses.

Little Phyllis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Koenig, dressed in peach silk and carrying the rings on a white satin pillow, was ring bearer.

During the ceremony Mrs. Wm. Groves and Mrs. James Morgan sang two duets "I Love You Truly" and "Because."

Immediately following the ceremony a reception was held at the St. Mary Hall where many beautiful gifts were received by the couple. Dancing was enjoyed by the 500 guests. Music was furnished by Henry Rolf and the Wachter Orchestra. Refreshments were served.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Eggert will reside with the bride's parents in Mokena.

TWO TINLEY PARKERS HELD UP IN CHICAGO

Last week Rudolph Freborg and Miss Bernetta Wannemacher, both of Tinley Park, were held up in Chicago. Mr. Freborg who is serving on the jury got off a street car at 63rd and Wentworth and was on his way to the R. I. railroad, when the last thing he saw were two black hands going around his throat and he was dragged into an alley. When he came to he was minus $2 and some of his pockets were torn. The hold-up men had missed a larger sum of money which he had in another pocket.

Miss Wannemacher was coming home from the school where she is learning beauty culture when suddenly a man jumped out at her and demanded her money. Instead she began to scream and ran, so the thief got nothing. Let us hope this will be the first and last time for such an experience.

Tinley PTA Observes Dad's Night Program

Friday evening, December 7th the Tinley Park PTA celebrated Dads Night in the school auditorium. Mr. Orville Bright was the speaker and he gave a most interesting talk on "Bringing up a Boy or Girl." Having had the experience of raising three sons and two daughters he declared "go out and tell others" is the style in America. One of his theories was the boy or girl did not get all their learning in books, but from the time they are born, it is a continual study till death.

There were musical numbers, violin solos by Mr. Freborg, songs by Miss Kinman, Clyde Rice, and Walter Bruennig.

Mr. Myer, principal of the Tinley Park school tried to explain the true condition of the school and why the doors would be closed December 21st and for an indefinite time.

Everyone is hoping the state will come to the rescue and open the school January 2nd, 1935.

After the meeting closed everybody was served with sandwiches and coffee. Home made candy was sold during the evening.

Tinley Park School Forced to Close Due To Lack of Funds

Organization of a Cook County School Board Association pledged to a militant campaign for state or federal relief for hard pressed school districts was in the making this week as officials of another south Cook County community, Tinley Park, announced that the public grade school in Tinley Park will be closed indefinitely after December 21st because of lack of educational funds.

More than seventy school board members and school patrons representing suburban districts in every section of the county, decided Friday night at a meeting in Steger to form the association and launch the campaign at once. The organization formalities were to have been completed Monday night in Tinley Park but because of the blizzard a meeting called for that purpose was postponed until Tuesday night. At this meeting representatives were present from the school boards of Midlothian, Calumet City, Steger and Tinley Park. On Monday night a representative from the Franklin Park school board came, but he did not return to the Tuesday meeting.

Plans for the organization were suggested by the officials of the Steger school district who issued the call for the meeting held Friday night. The proposal was unanimously adopted and Supt. F. R. Schmann of the Steger schools was named chairman of a committee to arrange for election of officers. It was decided to invite every school board in the county, both of high school and grade school districts to enroll in the association.

Announcement of the impending closing of the Tinley Park school added further impetus to the movement for unified action on the part of other school districts confronting the same critical conditions. The Tinley Park school has an enrollment of 213 pupils and employs six teachers. The reasons which caused the board here to order the shut down are the same that brought about the closing of the Steger public schools on October 31st.

Moreover at least forty other Cook county districts will probably be forced to suspend public education within the next three months, unless some relief is obtained. County Supt. Otto F. Akin, declared, "This is the beginning of a collapse that will affect thousands of children," he said.

Objectives of the Cook County association were discussed at some length at the meeting at Steger, Friday evening. The principal speaker was Leo W. Chulock of Maywood, president of the Illinois School Boards Association.

Mr. Chulock explained some of the legislative proposals sponsored by the state associations for the relief of the poorer districts of the state. He invited Cook County Association, when it is fully organized, to join with the state body, in appearing before the general assembly at the regular session in January to demand the enactment of the remedial legislation.

Representatives of school boards in Calumet City, Midlothian and other nearby towns and communities told briefly, of the conditions in their districts. Then followed a general discussion of the possibilities of obtaining federal relief, to make possible reopening of the Steger schools.

Latest regulations for the guidance of Illinois automobile owners in applying for their 1935 motor vehicle licenses have been announced by Secretary of State Edward J. Hughes.

Chief among them are the following:

Applications for either passenger car or truck licenses must be submitted on special forms provided by the secretary of state, which may be obtained from city, and county clerks, automobile agencies, newspaper offices, notaries and at gasoline stations.

at the meeting, said that Federal Relief Administrator Hopkins had virtually agreed to extend temporary relief or aid to the school district, providing Gov. Horner will approve a plan of joint state and federal action. Thus far the state authorities have made no effective move in that direction, he said.

Mrs. Anna E. Ginders of Rockford, wife of Guy W. Ginders, former Winnebago county sheriff and state representative, died following a lingering illness.

Edward Locke, thirty-seven, of Tonica, died as the result of a skull injury. A coroner's jury laid the fatal injury to a blow from a hoe in the hands of a fellow worker, Francis Pawless, also of Tonica.

William J. Burke, seventy years old, a retired farmer, died in his home in Wankegan. His death leaves his brother Frank, assistant supervisor of Wankegan township, as the sole survivor of a family of eleven children.

Suit was filed in Circuit court at Belleville by the trustees of the village of Cahokia, seeking an order to remove the village school from the public square. The suit was brought after the school board refused to lease two lots on which the school stands for $1 a year, contending that the property belongs to the school.

The state canvassing board, officially certifying the Democratic victory of November 6, announced that 2,935,192 votes were cast in the 1934 general election in Illinois. This is a new record for an off year election, the previous high mark having been 2,332,696 in 1930. In 1932, 3,407,926 votes were cast for President. The board refused to hear contests involving the election of two Republican and one Democratic senator in Cook county.

Expressing the opinion that at no previous time has it been more important to unify into an aggressive campaign against diseases the available resources of scientific knowledge and professional workers, Dr. Frank J. Jirka, director of the state department of public health, has called a conference of all Illinois health officers, public health nurses and interested citizens to take place in Springfield on December 11 and 12. The object of the meeting is to lay out a state-wide program of disease control which will utilize to the best advantage the newer knowledge and latest methods of applying that knowledge in preventing epidemic diseases.

Construction of two locks and dams and additional channel widening, at a total cost of $15,530,000 in the Illinois river to improve the existing waterway is being recommended by the President's committee on water flow, which is developing a comprehensive plan for the guidance of congress in legislation to develop the nation's watersheds. The preliminary report requests that the 50-year-old lock and dam at La Grange be replaced at a cost of $4,500,000. It recommends construction of a new lock and dam near Peoria, at a cost of $4,621,000, pointing out that the present diversion of water from Lake Michigan, 6,500 cubic second feet plus domestic pumpage, will be reduced to 1,500 feet on January 1, 1939, under the decree of the Supreme court.

The annual reunion of the Thirty-third Division War Veterans' association was held at Peoria with Charles B. Dickerson, president of the organization, in the chair. Among the guests of honor were Lieut.-Gen. Milton J. Foreman, who, during the war, commanded the One Hundred and Twenty-second field artillery; Col. Henry J. Allen of the One Hundred and Eighth engineers; Col. Walter J. Fisher, now in command of the One Hundred and Sixth cavalry, Illinois National Guard, including the famous Chicago Black Horse troop, who, during the war, commanded the One Hundred and Eighth ammunition train; Brig.-Gen. John V. Cline, commander of the One Hundred and Thirty-first infantry and later the One Hundred and Thirtieth infantry; Brig.-Gen. John J. Garrity, One Hundred and Thirty-second infantry, and Lieut.-Gen. Joseph B. Sanborn, who commanded the One Hundred and Thirty-first infantry.

Election came fairly cheap to Illinois' congressional victors at the polls November 6. Representative Allen of Galena reported to the clerk of the house he spent not one cent throughout his campaign. Representative Keller and Representative-Elect McKeogh likewise reported their expenditures had come to nothing. The largest amount was spent by Representative Britten of Chicago, who was defeated by the former Representative James McAndrew, a Democrat. In his preliminary report Britten said he disbursed $3,400, of which $2,900 was exempt. The campaign expenditure which caused the most interest was that of Martin Adlai Brennan, Democratic incumbent representative at large. Two years ago Brennan reported his expenditures at $3, and apologized to the federal government for getting "hooked" for that much. He explained his vanity got the better of his real nature and the $3 was spent to have a phonograph record made of his voice. This year Brennan spent $50 for campaign cards. There was no apology.

Sam Jackson, forty, was killed by a fall of rock in Johnson City at Old Ben mine 18. He was working with a safety crew to improve working conditions in that part of the mine. Fred Norman, Marion, also was hit by rock, but his injuries were not serious.

A campaign against alleged relief grafting in St. Clair county was begun as State's Attorney Louis Zerweck filed six informations charging seven persons with obtaining relief money under false pretense. Two policemen, making a combined salary of $250 a month, were charged in one information with obtaining relief money.

Lesson for December 16

THE CHRISTIAN AND THE LORD'S SUPPER

LESSON TEXT—I Corinthians 11: 23-24.
GOLDEN TEXT—For as often as ye eat this bread, and drink this cup, ye do shew the Lord's death till he come.—I Corinthians 11:26.

PRIMARY TOPIC—The Supper Jesus Gave His Friends.

JUNIOR TOPIC—How the Lord's Supper Began.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Why Observe the Lord's Supper?

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Realizing Christ's Presence in the Supper.

By the Lord's Supper here is meant the bread and the wine used as emblems of the broken body and shed blood of the Lord Jesus Christ. Some Christians think of the Lord's Supper as a meal of fellowship eaten before the institution of the bread and the cup. To them it means the agape or love-feast which was practiced in the early church. Such would prefer to call this the Communion instead of the Lord's Supper. With this understanding, we can enter into the real understanding and blessing of the ordinance.

1. The Institution of (v. 23).

1. The time. It was on the night of the betrayal of the Lord Jesus, after the betrayer had been announced.

2. Circumstances of (Matt. 26:26). It was in connection with the eating of the Passover. At the command of Jesus the disciples made ready the Passover, and while they were eating Jesus took bread, blessed it, and gave it to them.

3. The elements used. Bread—doubtless common bread of the Passover-feast. The Cup—the fruit of the vine.

11. The Significance of (vv. 24-26). Cf. Matt. 26:28-29.

Jesus took natural and literal elements and made them to be symbols of his own body and blood.

1. It is a memorial of the Lord (Lk. 22:19). When Jesus Christ left the world, he left the bread and the cup for the disciples, by which to remember him.

2. To show the Lord's sacrificial death (v. 26). He did not die as a hero, or as an example of unselfish devotion, but as a substitutionary ransom on the cross he made satisfaction for our sins.

3. It is a guaranty that our sins are forgiven (Rom. 4:25). "It was the signet of the Son of God attached to redemption."

4. It symbolizes the believer's reception of Christ (1 Cor. 10:16). He thereby participates in the body and blood of Christ, becoming a member of his body.

5. It has a forward look to a completed redemption (v. 26). When faith in Christ is exercised, redemption begins, and its completion will take place at the coming of Christ (1 Thess. 4:16, 17). The bread and the cup constitute the keepsake of the Lord until he returns.

III. Qualifications for Participation in the Lord's Supper (vv. 27-29).

1. A proper apprehension of its meaning (v. 27). Eating and drinking unworthily primarily refers not to the demerit of the communicant, but to his failure to grasp the meaning and importance of the ordinance. Only regenerated persons can discern the Lord's body. Faith in the integrity of Christ's person and work is essential. Anyone who does not believe in the absolute deity of Christ and his vicarious atonement is an unworthy communicant.

2. Church membership (1 Cor. 11:18-22). The Lord's body is the church, which is composed of regenerated men and women united to Jesus Christ as head, and to each other as members of that body, by the Holy Spirit.

3. An orderly walk. Conduct which disqualifies for participation in the Lord's supper:

a. Immorality (1 Cor. 5:1-13). It is most perilous for one who is guilty of immorality to approach the Lord's table (v. 30). Sickness and death are often visited upon such.

b. Heresy (Titus 3:10; 1 John 4:2, 3). This means that one who holds false doctrine is disqualified for participation in the communion.

c. A Schismatic (Rom. 16:17). The one who stirs up party strife, who causes divisions in the church, should be excluded from the Lord's table.

IV. Penalty for Failure to Discern the Lord's Body (vv. 30-34).

Approaching the Lord's table unworthily issues in the visitation of sickness and death upon the individual. This seems to be plainly the meaning of "weak and sickly among you, and many sleep." This explains the illness of many Christians. The way to escape the judgment is to judge ourselves.

Patience

Patience means "to stay under the burden." It is a call to be loyal to the difficult task even when there are open doors of escape. It means that the whole man should stay in the hard place—heart, head and body.

They Are the Winners

All those who wear the white robe of spiritual purity are those who have overcome in the struggle with all that is base and foul in the experience of mankind.

HOW TO SHOOT

By Bob Nichols

Shooting Editor, Field and Stream

FREQUENTLY one runs across the shooter who declares he could not do good work in the field without the aid of the matted rib on his shotgun barrel. Of course all American double-barrel shotguns have this matted sighting rib, and there seems to be more excuse for it on the double-tube gun. But the shooter who hold enthusiastically to the necessity for the matted sighting-rib are usually those who shoot single-barrel repeating guns.

I personally do not favor a sighting-rib of any description, matted or otherwise, on a single-tube shot gun. For two reasons.

In the first place the rib adds weight to the gun. And what is more to the point, the rib adds weight at the muzzle where any awkward excess weight should certainly be avoided. Added weight out beyond the support of the hands tends to make the gun muzzle-heavy unwieldy to handle, slow to swing.

In the second place, the matted rib on the single-tube tends to command too much attention from the eye. Which means that in pointing and aiming, too much of your eyesight is unconsciously drawn to the gun when it should be concentrated on the target. The eye loves straight lines. To prove this, stand on the edge of a cornfield when the crop is only about a foot high and casually glance at various spots in the field. The first impression your eye registers is of the long straight sighting line. Instead of only 30 per cent of your eyesight being concentrated on the gun, 60 per cent on the target, and 10 per cent on the area immediately surrounding the target—you may find yourself devoting a full 50 to 60 per cent of your eyesight on the gun.

No man can hope to become a really fine upland wingshot if his matted-rib gun demands that much of his eye attention. It will make a slow shot of him. He may do well enough when the shooting is in the clear open spaces. But when the cover gets dense and the birds go booming out in twisting, turning flight through the tops of the briars, then the slow-aiming shot has a tough time of it. And many a reproachful look he will get—and deserve—from his faithful old dog.

I feel reasonably certain that some of the leading gun makers of England have already recognized this fault of the too-prominent rib on the upland field gun. For I have run across a number of their fine double-tube guns that are made with smooth inconspicuous ribs, ground concavely on top, and entirely without the matted surface that is so likely to command an excess of eye attention. The ribs on these guns are polished to the same stain-smooth finish of the barrels. In aiming one of these fine guns, one is not at all conscious of the rib "pulling" too hard on one's eyesight.

Of course, if one's gun does not fit him, then I can see why the matted rib on top would become quite necessary. But on the other hand, if a man's upland gun does not fit him, then he has no business using it any way. He will never realize his potential shooting skill with such a gun, and should take immediate steps to make the necessary stock adjustments so that his gun will fit.

In duck shooting, especially on high-flying pass shooting, it is not so absolutely essential that a man's gun shall fit him. It can have too much drop at the heel of the stock, have long cumbersome barrels, and be greatly over-weight, and yet he can do good work with it. Because in this type of wingshooting you have plenty of time to adjust yourself to your gun. You see your game coming from a distance. With deliberate movements you aim almost as with a rifle. Your hold must be very accurate because of the long range. This type of duck gun is almost a mathematical instrument. But the upland gun is the tool of an artist!

Reasons for Slipping of Human Intelligence

One reason why average human intelligence is deteriorating was suggested at a recent meeting of the Institute of Handicraft Teachers, in London, by Prof. Raymond Butler, head of the Aston Technical college at Birmingham. It is neglect of Nature's method of training brains by joint use of brains and hands.

Evolutionists believe that the first steps toward human intelligence were taken ages ago by tree animals whose lives required precise co-ordination of hands and eyes; to leap safely between branches, to seize fruits or nuts to eat, to repel enemies, and so on. Necessity of translating eye stimuli into quick and accurate hand movements gradually made the brain larger and more competent.

Modern tests of how children learn also indicate that similar joint training of hand and eye to work together is an important help in improving individual brains, according to the Baltimore Sun.

Nowadays this joint training of hand and eye is rare. Many popular games, such as cross-word puzzles, require none of it. Education has become largely book learning. Even handwriting has deteriorated. Most anthropologists suspect that average human intelligence is lower now than in previous ages and still is lessening.

"DRESDEN PLATE"
CROCHETED RUG

By GRANDMOTHER CLARK.

In Colonial days patchwork quilts and rag rugs were very popular. During the past 3 or 4 years patchwork quilts have been the leading item of interest for home art needle-workers. In 1933, when the crocheted rag rug in quilt design appeared, women all over the country took great interest in this new and beautiful way of making rag rugs. The old rugs were either round or oval, crocheted row after row until desired size was obtained. Changing of colors was the only variation. In quilt design rugs many beautiful combinations are possible and the work is really interesting.

Illustration above shows the "Dresden Plate" rug, named after the Dresden Plate or Friendship quilt, a pattern that every woman knows. This rug is another popular pattern, measures 34 inches and can be made from 40 oz. of Grandmother Clark's rag rug strips or 32 oz. of "Linkraft," the new woven material for rag rugs.

Send 15c to our Rug Department and get our book No. 24 showing 20 different crocheted rugs in quilt design in colors with illustrations.

COLOR BLIND NOT
IDEAS OF LIGHT

At the Indiana State Medical association's exhibit at the Indiana state fair, free examinations for color blindness were offered. Tests were made of 4,442 men, women and children—2,079 males and 2,363 females. Of the males, 156, or 7.5 per cent, were color blind to some degree, and only ten of the females, or .423 per cent.

Of 166 persons who had some impairment, 61 were completely red-green blind, 43 incompletely red-green blind, 23 blind to the lighter shades of green, 22 incompletely green blind, eight completely green blind and incompletely red blind; two completely red blind and two completely red blind and incompletely green blind. Of the ten women, four were completely red-green blind, four incompletely red-green blind and two incompletely red-green blind. Eight were blonds and two brunettes. Only two knew they were color blind. Three were sisters that had a brother who was incompletely green blind.

Only 66 of the 166 knew that they could not tell the difference between red and green. Some who lived on farms said that they could not tell ripe tomatoes or strawberries from green ones and could not see red

The Voice of the American Legion

By The Tinley Park Post No. 615

Questions commonly asked Legionnaires, and their answers.

What Is The American Legion?
The American Legion is an organization of World War Veterans who served honorably on active service in the armed forces of the United States.

When Was The Legion Formed?
First steps toward organization were taken at a caucus in Paris, France, March 15 to 17, 1919. A temporary constitution was adopted, temporary officers elected and general policies formulated at a caucus in St. Louis, Missouri, May 8 to 10, 1919. A national charter was granted by Act of Congress on September 16, 1919. Permanent organization was effected and a constitution and by-laws adopted at the First National Convention in Minneapolis, Minn., Nov. 10 to 12, 1919.

How Is The Legion Organized?
The Legion is organized by departments and posts. Membership is in the national organization by affiliation with a post. There are 58 departments, one in every State in the Union, one in the District of Columbia and others in territorial possessions of the United States and in certain foreign countries. There are 10,000 posts established in every part of the United States and throughout the world.

Who Is Eligible To Membership?
Eligibility is defined by the constitution (Article IV, Sec. 1) thus: "Any person shall be eligible for membership in the American Legion who was regularly enlisted, drafted, or inducted or commissioned and who was accepted for and assigned to active duty in the Army, Navy or Marine Corps of the United States at some time during the period between April 6, 1917, and Nov. 11, 1918, both dates inclusive, or who, being a citizen of the United States at the time of his entry therein, served on active duty in the naval, military or air forces of any of the governments associated with the United States during the Great War; provided that no person shall be entitled to membership (a) who, being in the Army, Navy or Marine Corps of the United States during said period refused on conscientious political or other grounds to subject himself to military discipline or unqualified service, or (b) who, being in such service, was separated therefrom under circumstances amounting to dishonorable discharge and has not subsequently been officially restored to an honorable status."

Is the Legion Political?
Absolutely not. Section 2 and 3, Article II, of the constitution says: "Section 2. The American Legion shall be absolutely non-political, and shall not be used for the dissemination of partisan principles nor for the promotion of the candidacy of any person seeking public office or preferment. No candidate for or incumbent of a remunerative elective public office shall hold any office in The American Legion or in any department or post thereof."

"Section 3. Each member shall perform his full duty as a citizen according to his own conscience and understanding."

Is the Legion Non-Sectarian?
Absolutely. No distinction of sect or creed is recognized.

What Is the Legion's Purpose?
Service—service to community, State and Nation! Members of the Legion gave service while they were members of the armed forces of the United States in the World War. The Legion was organized that they might continue to give the same service in time of peace as they gave in time of war.

What Are Legion Principles?
Principles of the Legion are set forth in the Preamble of the Constitution as follows:

Preamble to the Constitution

For God and Country, we associate ourselves together for the following purposes: To uphold and defend the Constitution of the United States of America; to maintain law and order; to foster and perpetuate a one hundred per cent Americanism; to preserve the memories and incidents of our association in the Great War; to inculcate a sense of individual obligation to the community, state and nation; to combat the autocracy of both the classes and the masses; to make right the master of might; to promote peace and good will on earth; to safe-guard and transmit to posterity the principles of justice, freedom and democracy; to consecrate and sanctify our comradeship by our devotion to mutual helpfulness.

Because the grade school scouts of New Lenox failed to appear for their game with the Mokena grades, a revised line up consisting of High School as well as grade school players from Mokena was sent against the New Lenox light weight team of scouts. Although we were all disappointed in not seeing our fighting grade school team play a regular game, we were somewhat consoled by the humor brought out in the game which took its place.

Mr. Dunn has assured us that everything will be done in the future to prevent the necessity for such a last minute change in the program. The summary of the High School game follows:

Out of the Fountain of Youth

HEALTH BIG FACTOR IN RETAINING YOUTH

A FURROWED brow may be a good subject for a mother song, but as a mark of beauty it isn't very desirable. It comes usually as a sign of age or mental stress or ill health. Of course, it is quite impossible for people to prevent themselves from growing older, but showing that age can be prevented to a surprising extent.

Scientists have found that one of the greatest factors in the preservation of youth is Vitamin A, which is found to be contained in large amounts in fresh pasteurized milk. By keeping the complexion fresh, the body structure complex, and the teeth in good condition, signs of advancing age can be indefinitely sidetracked.

Mental stress is often caused by health. Following a well balanced diet rich in vitamins and minerals can do much toward restoring good health and doing away with that cause for worry. Everyone realizes that a person who is ill cannot keep his mind on business affairs, and that persons who enjoy sound health are not easily discouraged. Good health, then, might be said to be one way of overcoming financial troubles.

If health can be made the means of removing signs of age, restoring one's physical well-being, and relieving the causes of worry, it would seem to behoove everyone to get himself a share of good health.

SYNOPSIS

Prudence Schuyler comes to Prosperity Farm, inherited from her uncle, to make a new life for herself and her brother, David, his health broken by tragedy. The second day on her farm Prue falls from the barn loft into the arms of Rodney Gerard, rich young man, a neighbor. There is at once a mutual attraction, but Prudence suspects men since her sister's husband ran away with her brother's wife. Len Calloway tries to buy Prue's timber, but she contracts with Rod to dispose of the trees. David comes to the farm. A clown appears, advertising a circus in a nearby town. Prue accompanies Rod and Jean to the show. Chicot, an old clown, is accidentally killed. He was the grandfather of Milly Gooch, one of the circus riders. Rod became friendly with Milly when she lived on Prosperity Farm. Calloway intimidates available laborers so that they cannot be hired to cut the timber for Rodney Gerard. Milly Gooch broke her engagement to Calloway; he believes Rod was the cause and has since been his enemy. After the accident to Chicot, Rod calls on Milly to see if he can be of any help. Prue hardens herself still more against Rod when she sees in the newspaper a flashlight picture of him with Milly. Rodney is forced to go to New York for timber cutters. David goes with him to help select men from among the Rescue Mission hangers-on.

Apparently unaware of her latent hostility, he tweaked his daughter's short hair, explained that he had come to see Rod on business, that when he discovered he had gone he had planned to follow him to the city.

"But now," he looked at Prudence and twisted one end of his mustache, "I'll camp here until Rod returns."

Armstrong touched Prue's arm. "Jump into the car. You were in a hurry to get home, weren't you?"

Prudence caught Jean's hand. "Your daughter is coming to stay with me, Mr. Gerard. The visit was planned before we knew you were coming. You won't need her here, will you?"

Walter Gerard smiled. "Of course, I shall miss my dear little girl, but I wouldn't deprive her of what I know will be a pleasure. An revoir. Don't feel badly about leaving me, Jean. I'll drop in to see you daily."

The car shot forward. At the entrance to the red brick house, Armstrong, lifting a bag from the rumble, said in a low voice:

"If that fellow annoys you by coming here, Prue, give me a ring. I'll see that he doesn't repeat."

"My word, Jim, don't scowl so. How can you stop his coming to see his 'dear little girl'?"

"Piffle! He's lost his job. I'll bet a hat. Rod would lose his mind if he knew Walt was in the neighborhood."

"Then he mustn't know. Curious that he should appear just as Rodney left. I wonder—I wonder—" She looked up at Armstrong's spectacled eyes without seeing them.

"Do you know, Jim, something tells me that Calloway pulled the wire that brought Walter Gerard to High Ledges."

CHAPTER VIII

As the week traveled forward, Prudence's suspicion that Walter Gerard and Calloway were in some underground fashion allied strengthened. Why did she think it, she asked herself, as perched on a stepladder she carefully wielded a brush in her white-gloved hand.

Another splash of yellow on her blue smock. One before had trickled from her suspended brush an hour ago when she had heard a plane flying over the house. For an instant she had thought that her brother and Gerard had returned from New York; then she realized that it could not be they, they wouldn't come without the men from the Rescue mission—supposing that the men had decided to accept the offer of work.

"Miss Prue! Miss Prue," Jean, in a white apron over her green wool frock, followed her voice into the room. "Mr. Jim is here! Uncle Rod is coming tomorrow!"

"Tomorrow!" Gloved hand clutching the handle of the paint pail, Prudence perched on the top of the steps. "Tomorrow!" she repeated, as Armstrong entered carrying a long, white cardboard box. "Are they really coming tomorrow, Jim? Look at this room!"

He peered about in his short-sighted way. "It is upset, isn't it? Can't you get it straightened out before they come?"

"Straightened out! The paper isn't on."

"No hurry. You'll know why when you hear Rod's letter. That is, if you want to hear it. It came by plane—with this."

He held out the white box. "For me?" Prudence looked at it without touching it.

"If your name is Prudence Schuyler, it is, isn't it? Take it. Come off those steps. Don't look at it as if you expected it concealed a bomb."

Prudence set the box on the table, untied strings, and removed wrappings.

"Oh-o-o! How beautiful!" Prudence clasped her hands in ecstasy as she looked down at the long-stemmed roses in the open box. She lifted two of the lovely blossoms to her face.

"Rod certainly has said it with flowers this time," Armstrong observed gruffly.

"Said what?" Prudence demanded, and promptly wished she had not asked the question.

"Your innocence is good but not good enough, Prue. Want to hear this letter? I'm in a hurry."

"Of course I want to hear it. Jean, dear, take the roses to Jane Mack and ask her to put them in vases. Come to the shop, Jim."

Armstrong followed Prudence into the room. As she perched on the stool in front of the tool-littered bench, he frowned at the open safe.

"Do you leave that unlocked? You need a guardian. It would be easy for someone to pick up those unset jewels you told me you owned. I don't want to frighten you, but that escaped convict is still at large."

"It may ease your mind to learn that you and David and Jean—and one other, I did tell Rodney Gerard—are the only persons who know I have those unset stones."

"Four! It's four too many. There's bound to be one broadcaster in the bunch. Keep the safe locked. Is Walt Gerard still putting on the devoted father act? He has, as I suspected, lost his job. Why is he hanging round this town? I don't like his eyes. They are furtive."

"He is here on one pretext or another every day. He pretends that I am the lure—I've heard his obvious line before—but I know that I'm not. And it isn't a paternal urge which brings him, I'll wager my best bit of jade."

"Does he annoy you?"

"Don't roar. He annoys me by taking my time which I want to devote to work. I have several Christmas orders besides this necklace I'm making for Jean."

"What will you do first, Miss Prue?"

Jean's question brought Prue's attention back to the present. With long pincers she began to poke among the colorful tourmalines.

"As there is no need to hurry about getting the living room in order, I'll put in an hour at my bench. Change of work will rest me. Bring me the stones from the safe, will you, Jean?"

"Goody, I love to look at them."

"Miss Prue!" Jane Mack appeared in the doorway. "The market man phoned. He wants eggs and wants them quick. He has a rush order, and he says, can you bring them right down to the village?"

Prudence dropped the pincers and pulled off the painty smock. "Of course we can, Macky. Come on, Jean, we'll gather the eggs. Put the packets of stones in the safe, will you, Macky? Don't lock it. Leave the tourmalines on the bench. I may have time to select the colors when I return."

It was somewhat difficult to make a domestic career and an artistic career jibe, Prudence decided an hour later in her shop, as again she slipped into her smock. She had brought the paper hanger from the village. David might decide to come to the red brick house instead of going to High Ledges, she had reasoned, and it would be better to have the living room in order. She picked up the pincers and commenced to experiment with the tourmalines on a penciled design.

"This sketch isn't right. Bring my portfolio from the bookcase, will you, Jean?"

"All-righty."

Prudence poked and fitted. No combination of stones suited her. She called over her shoulder:

"Can't you find it? It ought to be on the bottom shelf."

"Where did you get this?"

"Get what?" Prudence turned. Jean was staring at the newspaper picture of Rodney Gerard and Milly Gooch.

"This. It's a picture of the same cutie circus rider I found in Uncle Rod's desk in the gun room at High Ledges. She'd written—I suppose she wrote them—some slushy words on the back. Stopped with just 1 o. Why didn't she finish it?"

A laugh, a hateful laugh, cut into her excited question. Jean stared at her father in the doorway; the clipper fluttered to his feet.

"So you found a picture in your uncle's desk? Prying again, my darling daughter?" He mimicked his wife's tone. "What happened to the photograph with the word love unfinished?"

Jean gulped. Her eyes appealed to Prudence who put her arm about the thin shoulders.

"Answer your father, dear."

"I—I think Mr. Calloway took it."

"Calloway! Can't you talk without gulping? Calloway has it? Jean, there are times when I'm tempted to—"

He took a step toward her. As his daughter crushed her face against Prue's shoulder, he laughed.

"Don't be afraid. For a minute I saw red. I hate that man Calloway like the devil. He doesn't love your Uncle Rodney, and with that picture in his boy friends, Terry McGowan and Shance O'Shea, are in our personally conducted party. Love to the Kurious Kid.

Yours,

Rod."

Armstrong folded the letter. "The pilot left an hour ago with my letter telling Rod to come on with the gang. Calloway is too keen not to know of the work going on at High Ledges, he must suspect Rod's plan, but, just the same, I wish he might be providentially called out of town an hour or so before that train arrives."

Prudence shook her head. "Perhaps you'll think I have a four cylinder mind when it comes to experimenting—but—I'm afraid Rodney Gerard will be frightfully disappointed when he tries to make those men work."

"I'm not. Rod has—better say had—a lazy manner, but he has developed into a hard-hitting, daring business man. He's a dynamo when he gets his mind made up."

A picture flashed on the screen of Prue's mind: Rodney Gerard standing in the sunshine before the big barn; she could smell the scent of the hay, see his eyes deepen to indigo, hear his voice, low, controlled, declare:

"I'm not in that class you detest. I'll make you take back what you said about my being of that type. I'll make you! It will be a no-quarter battle. Get me?"

She had been on the verge of taking it back when Milly Gooch had—

"Would Jean and I complicate matters, Jim, if from a discreet distance we watched the arrival of David and his followers?"

"Not if you keep out of sight. I'll drop in this evening to report. Take it easy, Prue. Don't rush to finish that room."

When he had gone, Prudence laid her face against the crimson beauty of the roses and drew a long breath of their fragrance. Lovely things! It wasn't their fault that a man whom she disliked and distrusted had sent them. Jim Armstrong didn't know that "saying it with flowers" was a habit with Rodney Gerard.

"What will you do first, Miss Prue?"

Jean's question brought Prue's attention back to the present. With long pincers she began to poke among the colorful tourmalines.

"As there is no need to hurry about getting the living room in order, I'll put in an hour at my bench. Change of work will rest me. Bring me the stones from the safe, will you, Jean?"

"Goody, I love to look at them."

"Miss Prue!" Jane Mack appeared in the doorway. "The market man phoned. He wants eggs and wants them quick. He has a rush order, and he says, can you bring them right down to the village?"

Prudence dropped the pincers and pulled off the painty smock. "Of course we can, Macky. Come on, Jean, we'll gather the eggs. Put the packets of stones in the safe, will you, Macky? Don't lock it. Leave the tourmalines on the bench. I may have time to select the colors when I return."

It was somewhat difficult to make a domestic career and an artistic career jibe, Prudence decided an hour later in her shop, as again she slipped into her smock. She had brought the paper hanger from the village. David might decide to come to the red brick house instead of going to High Ledges, she had reasoned, and it would be better to have the living room in order. She picked up the pincers and commenced to experiment with the tourmalines on a penciled design.

"This sketch isn't right. Bring my portfolio from the bookcase, will you, Jean?"

"All-righty."

Prudence poked and fitted. No combination of stones suited her. She called over her shoulder:

"Can't you find it? It ought to be on the bottom shelf."

"Where did you get this?"

"Get what?" Prudence turned. Jean was staring at the newspaper picture of Rodney Gerard and Milly Gooch.

"This. It's a picture of the same cutie circus rider I found in Uncle Rod's desk in the gun room at High Ledges. She'd written—I suppose she wrote them—some slushy words on the back. Stopped with just 1 o. Why didn't she finish it?"

A laugh, a hateful laugh, cut into her excited question. Jean stared at her father in the doorway; the clipper fluttered to his feet.

"So you found a picture in your uncle's desk? Prying again, my darling daughter?" He mimicked his wife's tone. "What happened to the photograph with the word love unfinished?"

Jean gulped. Her eyes appealed to Prudence who put her arm about the thin shoulders.

"Answer your father, dear."

"I—I think Mr. Calloway took it."

"Calloway! Can't you talk without gulping? Calloway has it? Jean, there are times when I'm tempted to—"

He took a step toward her. As his daughter crushed her face against Prue's shoulder, he laughed.

"Don't be afraid. For a minute I saw red. I hate that man Calloway like the devil. He doesn't love your Uncle Rodney, and with that picture in his possession he can make trouble for him."

His shifting eyes rested for an instant on the tourmalines shooting rays of color as the sunlight touched them. He whistled, a long low whistle.

"Where did those come from? Did a traveling jeweler drop from the everywhere?"

Prudence held a stone to the light. "Nice color, isn't it?"

He took the pincers from her hand and held up the stone. "Nice! It's a corker. Interesting work you're doing. Do you use precious stones as well?"

Prudence nodded toward the safe. "Yes. In there I have a flawless emerald, a pigeon blood ruby, and a star sapphire with a number of diamonds. All of them, except the emerald, I bought at a bargain before the Schuyler income went down for the third time. I have more money tied up in gems than I can afford."

"Do you keep the jewels in this house?"

"Why not?"

He laid the tourmaline back on the white paper. "Why not, is right. I forgot when I asked the question that for years the residents of this village haven't locked their doors at night. Have you heard when Rod is coming back?"

"I haven't heard from your brother nor from mine, except a postcard of the Metropolitan museum with 'Feeling fine,' scrawled on it. As a letter writer David is a total loss."

"I suppose you have no idea what's being done to the old cattle barn?"

"Why not ask your brother? It is his property."

"I can wait for developments, and believe me, they'll come fast. Well, I'll get along." He glanced at the safe. "Better keep that locked. There is a convict on the loose, remember."

He turned on his heel and departed.

Farming might be thrilling, but it certainly took a lot of energy and strength when one was new at it, Prudence reflected, as late in the evening she flung herself on the couch in the firelight living room.

A clock ponderously told the hour. Her glance lingered on the crimson roses straight and perfect in the tall silver vase as she counted. Eleven! She punched the pillows under her head in a more comfortable arrangement. She ought to go to bed, but she was too dead to the world to move.

Her eyes went to the red roses as if drawn by a magnet. Feeling as she did about Rodney Gerard—hadn't Jean's disclosure about Milly Gooch's photograph crystallized her suspicions into unshakable conviction—she should have thrown them away. Lovely things. It wasn't their fault that—was it the paint which made her eyelids so heavy? Perhaps—

"Miss Prue! Miss Prue!"

A scream or a nightmare? Prudence stumbled to her feet. She had been dozing.

"Miss Prue!"

What looked to be a mammoth stick of pink and white striped candy shot down the bannister. Jean and Prue reached the threshold of the workroom together. A wobbling flashlight clutched in her bony hand revealed wild-eyed Jane Mack robed in a long white nightgown, buttoned close to throat and wrists.

Welland Canal Lock at Humberstone Is Longest

One of the locks on the Welland canal, the guard lock at Humberstone, 1,380 feet long, is the longest in the world, says the Detroit News. It is not high, however, but merely provides for adjusting the canal level to the varying level of Lake Erie. The two locks on the American side of the Sault Ste. Marie canal are 1,350 feet long and 80 feet wide, with a lift of about 22 feet. The Welland canal has seven lift locks, each 820 feet long, 80 feet wide and each with a lift of 46½ feet. The three twin locks at Thorold have a total lift of 139½ feet, which is 54½ feet greater than the Gatun locks of the Panama canal. The Panama canal has three locks at Gatun, near the Atlantic end; and the Pacific end has two at Miraflores and one at Pedro Miguel, the total lift being 85 feet. The usable length of these locks is 1,000 feet and the width 110 feet; these locks are in pairs. From the engineers' standpoint the Panama lock system is the most important.

Name "United States"

Thomas Jefferson, who prepared the Declaration of Independence in 1776, was probably the first to use the name "United States of America." The colonies were definitely proclaimed to be united in a resolution referring to the "Twelve United Colonies," adopted on June 7, 1775. On September 9, 1770, it was decided that in all continental commissions and other instruments where formerly the words "United Colonies" had been used, the style should be altered to the "United States." The reason there were only 12 colonies mentioned was that Georgia had not sent delegates to the First and Second congress. The United States can be said to date from the Declaration of Independence.

Washington.—Administration leaders in congress are prepared to oppose any addition to the tax burden of the country through the action of the next session. Although the White House has made no public pronouncement, it is the understanding that the leaders in the senate and the house who have taken unequivocal positions against a tax increase in 1935 were reflecting the view they had obtained from President Roosevelt in addition to their own conviction that this is a bad time to increase the levies which individuals and business interests must pay for the upkeep of the government.

During the current weeks there has developed some indication, if, indeed, it is not an assurance, that there will be curtailment of federal expenditures. Just how this is going to be accomplished is not yet clear but it can be stated on highest authority that a curtailment of the outgo from the treasury is expected to be accomplished. In making that statement, I think I ought to add that the curtailment is contemplated with respect to emergency agencies and does not include any of the various new proposals from segments of house or senate membership involving additional heavy outlays. As an example of this type of expenditure I refer to the proposal for immediate payment of the soldiers' bonus. That there is a strong demand for this action, there can be no doubt. Yet on the other hand there is bitter opposition both in congress and among administration leaders to the program that would entail payment of something like two billion dollars to the former soldiers, sailors and marines of World war days.

The question of taxation always is of an explosive character. Hence, the urge on the part of some of the new dealers for an increase in taxation so that emergency spending might be made to appear more in line with government income has precipitated an issue very quickly. The proposition had hardly begun to gain momentum when Senator Robinson of Arkansas, the Democratic floor leader of the senate, and Senator Harrison of Mississippi, chairman of the senate committee on finance, both were called to Warm Springs, Ga., for a conference with Mr. Roosevelt. It was said at that conference that taxation was not the only thing discussed but, nevertheless, both leaders came away from the temporary White House with the announcement that there would be no tax boost in the 1935 session of congress.

Simultaneously Representative Hill, Democrat, of Washington, chairman of a subcommittee of the house ways and means committee, made known his opposition to a tax boost. Mr. Hill's committee has devoted its attention to a survey of tax rates and revenue requirements and has reached the conclusion that to increase the levies now would be to retard recovery as a result of additional imposts on business. The Washington representative feels that the present tax structure will function properly and provide sufficient revenue just as soon as there is a return of something approaching normal commercial activity. He thinks there might be some simplification of the laws applying to the various forms of federal taxation but he considers them adequate as revenue producers if and when there is a normal volume of business.

In this connection it seems advisable to recall that Secretary Morgenthau of the Treasury sent a freshman team of brain trusters to England last summer to study the British tax system. While this committee's findings and recommendations to the secretary have not been made public, insiders tell me that the results of that investigation added very little to the sum total of knowledge concerning our own problem.

Mr. Hill, in discussing the government's financial condition, gave it as his opinion that "we are not in such bad shape now." His statement referred to an approximate balance between receipts and what the administration calls ordinary expenditures. These expenditures go for support of the regular government establishment and no part of them is used in maintenance of recovery operations such as the Agricultural Adjustment administration, the Public Works administration or the Reconstruction Finance corporation. The funds used by these alphabetical agencies come from the sale of bonds. It is borrowed money and sometime must be paid back. Mr. Hill assumed these repayments were not necessary to be considered at this time. He was concerned solely with having the ordinary expenses covered by the regular annual receipts.

There will be tax legislation in the forthcoming session. That is necessary. Its character, however, will be limited under present plans to considerations made necessary by expiration of certain present statutes. The emergency brought the necessity for enactment of various nuisance and excise taxes such as the tax on checks and gasoline and numerous others. Their expiration date was fixed in the statute as of July 1, 1935.

These must be continued. They have been producing something like four hundred and twenty million dollars annually, a good sized chunk of revenue in anybody's language. It is planned, therefore, to renew these. There may be some revision and some change in the bases but the principles involved in those levies seem certain to be continued.

Re-enactment of these statutes is not expected to have a material effect on business because business has become adjusted to them. I am informed by business experts that undoubtedly business would move forward more rapidly if these taxes could be eliminated. Since that is not to be, business is hoping, if not demanding, that the tax burden upon it be held within the present confines in order that it may not be under any further handicap while searching for a solid foundation upon which to expand.

President Roosevelt and his emergency administrators believe they have hit upon a new and productive plan to give money out to those who need it.

They are about to embark upon a program of encouraging personal loans, loans by banks to individual men and women and to guarantee repayment of a portion of each loan made.

It is viewed as exceedingly interesting that a national government, or any other governmental agency for that matter, should embark on such a policy because there are those who hold it to be a dangerous precedent. I have done considerable research work regarding this proposal and I have failed to find in the records any such move in the history of important nations of the world. It is, therefore, undoubtedly one of the most highly experimental steps yet taken in this maelstrom of recovery plans.

Announcement of the scheme was made by James A. Moffet, federal housing administrator, who described it as marking "a new era in American business." It is true that there are certain types of banking institutions that have made individual, or so-called character, loans where no collateral security was offered by the borrower and where only the good name and the record of the individual warranted extension of this credit.

Mr. Moffet said that this character loan idea would prove to be "the very foundation" of the home modernization program which he is administering. He described the action as one predicated upon the government's "absolute confidence that the average American will keep his promise to repay what he borrows."

"Nor is that position as much of a jump in the dark as it at first may seem," said Mr. Moffet. "As usual, Uncle Sam knows what he is doing. Before offering to insure these loans, he consulted the country's records on installment buying. He also asked what had been the experience of the few banks who up to last spring had made character loans. From the banks and from commercial organizations selling on the installment plan, he learned that the average American is honest, and that the loss from character loans was just a little more than three-fourths of 1 per cent."

It is not the fact that the government found the average American to be honest, however, that is exciting comment among Washington observers. It is that the government is encouraging loans to individuals, some of whom obviously will suffer the ordinary fate and be unable to repay them.

It is now believed that the world court issue will be settled definitely early in the next session of congress. The foreign relations committee of the senate, which must pass on such treaties, has an agreement to send the resolution of United States adherence to the world court to the senate early in January and, according to present indications, the administration can easily muster enough votes to adopt that resolution.

Pressure for American affiliation with the court is stronger now than it ever has been before because of the disturbed world political situation, the breakdown of the naval limitations treaties and the tendency among nations to split up into groups for arrangement of a balance of power.

Observers here take the position that American adherence to the world court would have far greater significance throughout the world now than it would have had earlier because of the revival of discussion as to whether the United States should enter the League of Nations. It will be recalled that President Wilson's proposal to join the League of Nations precipitated one of the most bitter controversies in which the senate has ever been engaged. It subsequently rejected the plan and little more has been heard of it until this fall and early winter. Now, there is what appears to be a determined movement on foot for the United States to join the league and some of the proponents of American adherence to the world court believe that a vote to join the world court will carry the United States one step nearer to affiliation with the league itself.

Christmas Gifts to the Nation

SURRENDER OF THE HESSIAN TROOPS TO GENERAL WASHINGTON AT TRENTON
(From an Old Painting, Courtesy of the Mabel Brady Garvin Institute of American Arts and Sciences, Yale University)

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

THE gifts which we bestow upon our friends at Christmas time are as varied as their wishes and our ability to fulfill them. Similarly, the "Christmas gifts" presented to our nation at one time or another have been a varied lot, among them a battle; a treaty of peace ending an unpopular and disastrous war; the world's tallest obelisk and one of its most famous memorials to a man; and, last but not least, several babies destined for fame in the service of their country. First in point of time and undoubtedly first in importance was the battle. It had its beginnings on Christmas day, 1776, and, although it was not fought until the following day, the victory which resulted was the finest "Christmas gift" this nation has ever received.

It is doubtful if most of us realize fully the magnitude of Washington's achievement that cold December morning 155 years ago. To appreciate its significance it is necessary to take into account the situation which confronted the commander in chief as he rode toward McConekey's ferry through the sunset of that dismal Christmas day to cross the Delaware.

The fortunes of American revolutionists were at a low ebb. In a year and a half of fighting they had scored but two real successes—they had forced the British out of Boston and had kept them out of Charleston. In August Washington had lost the Battle of Long Island with a loss of 600 killed and 1,000 captured. In November he had lost New York city and with it 2,600 soldiers trapped at Fort Mifflin. Next, Fort Mifflin had fallen to the British and with it large supplies of guns, food and clothing. By a masterful retreat through New Jersey he had saved the remnants of his army.

But the end of the game seemed not far away. His troops were dwindling as hundreds of the militia departed for their homes. Finally he had barely 6,000 left and many of these were soldiers whose term of duty would expire at the end of the year. Canada had been lost; the British had and his ragged, starving Continentals gave to the nation that Christmas in 1777 was an example of fortitude and devotion which has been an inspiration to their countrymen for a century and a half and which should be an inspiration for all time to come.

Six years later another and a brighter Christmas day came to George Washington. It was in the year 1783. The Revolution was won. On December 4 the commander in chief bade farewell to his officers in the historic scene in Fraunces tavern in New York city. On December 23 in the statehouse at Annapolis he stood before the Continental congress in another historic scene—his resignation as commander in chief of the Continental army. Then, writes John C. Fitzpatrick, in his "George Washington Himself," a biography published last year by the Bobbs-Merrill company:

"On Christmas Eve, he set out from Annapolis and reached his beloved Mount Vernon that same day. His aides, Benjamin Walker, David Cobb and David Humphreys, rode with him and their presence added to the gaiety of the Christmas festivities. In Philadelphia Washington had purchased toys and books and other gewgaws for the Custis children, and the Christmas of 1783 at Mount Vernon was a merry and happy one."

If Christmas, 1783, was a happy one for the master of Mount Vernon, Christmas 16 years later was a sad one for the nation because of him. For on December 14, 1799, the master of Mount Vernon had died. So the Christmas celebration a fortnight later was shadowed by the passing of one who had been "first in war, first in peace and first in the hearts of his countrymen."

But in the midst of their sorrow they were making plans for an enduring tribute to his memory. On December 23 his fellow-Virginian, John Marshall, introduced into the United States house of representatives a resolution providing that "a marble monument be erected by the United States in the city of Washington."

However, it was not until 1833 that several influential citizens of the Capital, headed by John Marshall, then chief justice of the Supreme court of the United States, organized the National Monument society and financed construction of the memorial until it rose to the height of 154 feet. But another 15 years were to drag by before congress gave official sanction to the project and another 36 years to elapse before the monument was to be completed. Finally on December 6, 1884, the capstone was set in place and Christmas day of that year saw the 555-foot shaft pointing skyward to remind Americans of the heights to which had risen the man in whose honor this "Christmas gift to the nation" had been erected.

The treaty of peace which was once such a gift to the nation was the Treaty of Ghent which in 1814 officially brought to a close our second war with England.

Shortly after the outbreak of hostilities Russia offered to arbitrate, not because of any fervent desire for world peace but because cessation would allow Great Britain to concentrate her strength against France with whom Russia was then fighting. But the offer was disregarded and for a year the war dragged along in a series of disasters to the American arms, relieved only by occasional brilliant victories at sea. New England was bitterly opposed to the war and for the first time in our history (long before South Carolina ever dreamed of it) there was a threat of secession.

In the spring of 1813 Madison accepted Russia's offer of mediation and appointed James Bayard and Albert Gallatin to join John Quincy Adams, American minister at St. Petersburg, as peace commissioners. But England declined to have Russia a party to such an arrangement and made it known that she would consider only direct negotiations. These were opened in Ghent, Belgium, in August, 1814, with Jonathan Russell and Henry Clay added to the American delegation.

From then on progress was slow. The British representatives had been instructed to make no concessions to the main demands of the Americans but instead to try to gain as many from them as possible. This, combined with their arrogant attitude, irritated the Americans, who were suspicious of virtually every suggestion offered by the Britishers. Especially was this true of Adams, whose irascibility increased as the conference dragged on and on, and only the tact and diplomacy of Gallatin more than once saved it from breaking up.

After a deadlock that lasted for some time, there came from America the news of the British defeat at Plattsburg. This, combined with a change in the diplomatic situation in Europe which made it advisable for England to conclude a peace as quickly as possible, finally put an end to the wrangling of the peace commissioners and on Christmas Eve an agreement was reached.

From the American point of view the peace was almost as unsatisfactory as the war had been. The important issue of impressment of American seamen was not mentioned and settlement of the long-standing disputes over boundaries, the Newfoundland fisheries and navigation of the Mississippi was postponed for the future. But it did put an end to hostilities and that was the Christmas gift of the American commissioners to their nation.

When on Christmas Eve, 1809, Mrs. Lindsey Carson, the wife of a farmer in Madison county, Kentucky, gave birth to a son she little realized, perhaps, that hers was a "Christmas gift to the nation" whose fame was to equal, if not surpass, that of her relative, Daniel Boone. More than a century later one of her son's biographers (Stanley Vestal) was to record the day of her travail as the time when "an under-sized, towheaded, bandy-legged, blue-eyed boy sped into the world squalling lustily with an uncontrolled excitement which no later adventure could arouse in him. Small, bandy-legged, blue-eyed and sandy-haired he remained to the end of his days and to this unimpressive appearance the sun added freckles. Yet this boy, typically backwoods as he was, and apparently no different from other lads of his family and community, was to exhibit such character, display such competence, and achieve such fame as to distinguish few other lone adventurers in history."

This boy's name was Christopher Carson, better known to hero-worshipping American boyhood as Kit Carson, hunter, trapper, fur-trader, scout, Indian fighter and a man ten times more deserving of the title of "pathfinder" than the man he guided, the pompous, strutting egotist, Fremont.

Fifteen years after Mrs. Lindsey Carson had presented her Christmas gift to the nation, a New England mother offered to it a gift that was similar and yet vastly different in many ways. In the Barton home in North Oxford, Mass., on Christmas day a baby was born. Perhaps if the child had been a boy he might have followed in the footsteps of Father Barton, who had fought in the Revolution under "Mad Anthony" Wayne.

But the baby was a girl and although Clara Barton was destined to go to war, it was not to help cause pain and suffering but to alleviate it.

At the outbreak of the Civil war she turned her energies to caring for the sick and wounded soldiers and led in organizing the Sanitary commission. She served in the army of the Potomac; aided the Andersonville prisoners upon their release, and after that was ended organized at Washington the bureau of records of missing men, and traced out the fate of 30,000 men.

In 1867 she visited Europe for the benefit of her health, and was at Geneva when the Franco-Prussian war opened. She joined at once in the work of the Red Cross society, founded in 1864; helped to organize the German hospital service, and nursed the sick and wounded.

Upon her return to this country in 1873 she inaugurated a movement to secure recognition of the Red Cross society by the United States government, and finally, during the administration of President Arthur, saw her labors rewarded. Naturally she became president of the American branch of the society when it was founded in 1882.

In the great fires in Michigan she superintended the work of succoring the afflicted and gave aid to the sufferers by the floods on the Ohio and Mississippi rivers in 1884 and at the great Johnstown flood in 1889.

So to the end of her days, which came in 1912, Clara Barton labored in the interests of the American Red Cross, and sufferers from disaster today who look to that "greatest mother in the world" for aid in time of need, can well be grateful to the New England mother for her "Christmas gift to the nation" nearly a century ago.

"WELL, if there isn't Jean Ellory!" Jean had been an old sweetheart of Salina's and she had not seen him for years; but she would know him in a million, for she had always loved him. He was busy cutting fancy figures on the ice. She stood watching him, her heart skipping beats as she did so.

The ice had been especially prepared for the Christmas holidays and Salina, in her pretty white wool sports outfit was gliding along, swan-like, still watching Jean Ellory out of the corner of her eye.

He must have felt the strong contact of her thought for suddenly he looked in her direction, but she quickly turned the other way. Then he skated more fiercely than ever, cutting a huge letter "S." She skated about pretending not to notice, but when he started off toward the far end of the lagoon she glided over to where he had cut the figures. There was the old-fashioned letter "S" and another and still another. There were "S's" all over. How she wondered if they represented the regular ice-cutter's "S" or if she really dared hope that they might by any chance stand for "Salina."

The snow was becoming heavier and more cumbersome and she noticed that most of the skaters had already left for home and celebrations.

All the way homeward she was thinking about Jean Ellory and stopping at intervals to trace his name in the snow. She must have written it a dozen times or more. The gifts she had been expecting for Christmas suddenly appeared insignificant and useless in comparison to the one vital gift—the love of Jean.

Only with a mighty struggle was Salina endeavoring to join in the Christmas celebrations, for her heart was nearly breaking.

"What is the matter, Salina?" questioned mother, as Salina almost choked with the lump in her throat.

"Nothing, Mother dear, only the Christmas spirit," answered Salina, bravely.

At this very moment Jean was hurrying home whistling merrily, his skates swinging over his shoulders. Suddenly he stopped short at seeing his own name displayed all over the snow, here, there and everywhere. "What on earth could that mean?" It was beautifully lettered and in a girl's handwriting!

Jean, stooping, carefully noted the letters in their every detail. He was determined to learn who the girl could be, who had so thought of him on Christmas eve that she had scrawled his name all over the snow.

Jean, quickening his pace, reached home, luckily before the celebrations had begun and skipped up the staircase two steps at a time to his own room. Most excitedly he dug through his belongings in search of a box of old valentines from school days. It was missing! Where could it be?

"Mother, have you seen my valentines?" shouted Jean.

"What on earth do you want with valentines on Christmas, Jean?"

"They are decorating the walls of my room and have been, for some time, my dear brother!" taunted Clara-Bell.

The next moment Jean was tearing down the valentines regardless of his sister's protestations and began frantically examining their contents, still leaving mother and sister stupefied.

"Here it is! I knew it! This is the one!"

Crushed in the hand of Jean was a small red, lace-trimmed heart with the words, "To Jean, from Salina." 'Twas an exact duplicate of the letters in the snow. Now he knew! Dear old Salina! His childhood sweetheart!

The doorbell at Salina's rang with a loud peal right in the midst of the Christmas celebration.

"Who could be calling on Christmas eve?" they all wondered.

"You had better go, Salina," said Mother, sweetly.

Salina went, brushing aside a tear, as she did so. She opened the door, as if in a dream scene. She had apparently lost all sense of reality for the moment.

"Salina!" said Jean.

"Jean, dear," replied Salina. The "dear" just slipping out from her heart before she knew it.

"My name in the snow," said Jean. "The letter 'S,'" whispered Salina. "Merry Christmas!" shouted the whole family.

EGYPT'S ATTRACTIONS

The tomb of King Tut-Ankh-Amen is now visited by nearly all Mediterranean cruisers, as are the temple of Karnak and the other great relics of ancient Egypt. The huge columns and still mighty ruins of the temple are subtly pleasing to feminists. One of Egypt's strong queens, Hatshepsut, played a leading part in directing the building of this temple.

When her brother succeeded her he jealously had all her inscriptions chiseled away and covered her great obelisks with a wall of masonry. With the centuries the masonry has crumbled away and Hatshepsut's obelisk was disclosed, unchanged despite the vindictiveness of kings.

IS a constant backache keeping you miserable? Do you suffer burning, scanty or too frequent urination; attacks of dizziness, rheumatic pains, swollen feet and ankles? Do you feel tired, nervous—all unstrung?

Then give some thought to your kidneys. Be sure they function properly, for functional kidney disorder permits poisons to stay in the blood and upset the whole system.

Use Doan's Pills. Doan's are for the kidneys only. They help the kidneys cleanse the blood of health-destroying poisonous waste. Doan's Pills are used and recommended the world over. Get them from any druggist.

landed at Newport and were threatening to cut off New England; the Middle States were swarming with Tories who were giving aid to the British. So certain was Lord Cornwallis that the war was almost over that he was packing up to return to England.

Small wonder that Thomas Paine on December 19 should write his immortal words: "These are the times that try men's souls." Certainly the great soul of the commander in chief was sorely tried in those dark days. For the whole cause of liberty rested on his broad shoulders. He needed a victory, needed it desperately if it was to be saved.

The result of that desperate need was the decision to attack the Hessian mercenaries under Colonel Rall with whom Cornwallis had garrisoned Trenton. It was, at best, a gamble. But Washington took the chance—and won! At the insignificant cost of four men wounded and not one killed, he inflicted upon the enemy a loss of 22 killed, 84 wounded and 868 captured.

But he did something more. He won the priceless advantage of time to recoup his forces, to pave the way for Saratoga and the French alliance and to save the infant republic from dying in its swaddling clothes. That was Washington's "Christmas gift to the nation" in 1776.

But if Christmas, 1776, was bright with victory, Christmas, 1777, was correspondingly dark with despair. For it was spent at Valley Forge and on Christmas day Washington noted in his orderly book that the army was huddled for the winter in cabins that were little more than piles of logs thrown up hastily around holes in the ground. He also reported that at this time the army had "not a single hoof of any kind to slaughter and not more than twenty-five barrels of flour." Few men had more than one shirt, "many only the moiety of one and some none at all." Owing to the lack of blankets numbers had to sit up all night by fires.

Dark as is this picture, it deserves a place in this chronicle. For the gift which Washington

Shaft Would Have Value

It is strange that an expedition into the earth's interior has never been seriously attempted. If we could sink a shaft only twelve miles into the ground we might strike all the coal and oil that would be needed in millions of years. In all likelihood we should find radium, gold, silver, diamonds, and other gems of untold wealth, as well as wonderful new met-
